A Note on discussion protocol

Most of our members have joined because they want to share knowledge on “advanced oil-field practice” within the community. It is designed to spread knowledge between companies and NOT replace the internal learning systems. Over 80% have in excess of 15 years experience, many have considerably more than that.

Less-experienced members of the forum should adhere to the following principles of the ‘site:

1. It is NOT a training site
2. It should not be used in cases where it is obvious that the person asking the question has made no effort to gain the knowledge by asking his or her colleagues or by doing some basic research.
3. All questions should include as much information as possible about the background to the questions, what it is you already know and/or have tried, what you are trying to achieve (and, if possible, why) etc.

Open questions, that do not contain much information, aren’t likely to get much response. Us oilfield people like nothing better than a detailed question or problem to solve!!
